100 HUNDRED SAILORS DROWN

German Ships Said to Have Made Signals to Destroy Interned Vessels

London, June 24.—More than 100 German sailors are believed to have perished while trying to escape in life boats after the scuttling of the German fleet at Scapa Flow. Some bodies have been washed ashore and have been buried.

A German four-master, it is said, appeared three miles off Scapa last Wednesday and gave signals to the German warships. The inference is that this mystery vessel conveyed the order for the sinking of the fleet.

A German wireless message picked up last night says the German crews went to England in the belief that the ships were to be preserved to the Fatherland but that when they found out this was not so they sank them in preference to surrender.

The British admiralty still considers the story to have been fully told in the 130-word statement Saturday, and has made no supplementary utterances.

The decision not to maintain armed guards on the German warships was taken by the allied council at Paris following the advice of the principal admirals, namely:

Wemyss for Great Britain; Debon, for France; Benson, for America; Grassi, for Italy.

The decision was approved by the prime ministers of the various powers. The British navy, therefore, had nothing to do but carry out orders.
